cussion was had upon it. The legal ele-donor and receiver inseparable for life. We ment in the House opposed the measure on purely legal grounds, while the larger number of the members supported it on the grounds of justice and equity. The arguments employed last year to defeat this bill, were reiterated this year. It was at variance with the Common ment street, in anticipation of the approach-Law of England, it was unconstitutional, the local Legislature had no jurisdiction past twelve years, that such an important in the matter, the right to legislate upon the subject was vested exclusively in the excelled another in a tempting array of Dominion House of Commons according to the terms of union, etc. It is very ness. well that all the members of the Legislature are not lawyers-that the majority are men of practical ideas, whose minds have not been cramped by years of study upon nice points of law, and who have not become so accustomed to be governed in their actions by precedent and what the book says, as to be incapable of giving expression to an original idea or taking a single step beyond that old besten track marked out for them by Coke, Blackstone & Co. Mr. Beaven's Legitimacy Bill is of that character which commends itself not only to a very large majority of the members of the House, but we believe it also has the endorsation of a majority of the people throughout the country. We have no wish to be considered the spologists of any class of persons who, regardless both of human and divine law, live in a state of open adultery; and that there has been and is still too much of that kind of thing tolerated in the country, is a fact which all good men must deplore-but which is the more guilty parties, those who thus break the law or those who thus permit the law to be broken, is an open question. As we understand this subject, the object of the Bill is not to encourage the practice of adultery, but rather to cure the evil by holding out an inducement to persons living together unlaw-fally to avail themselves of its provisions, and by getting married within the per-iod specified in the Act thereby legiti-mize their offspring and secure to them all the advantages they would have possessed had they been born in lawful wedlock. There are various reasons why such a law should be passed. There are very many persons living in this Province who settled in the country many years ago, who came here in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, at a time when the only females to be found in the entire length and breadth of the Company's possessions were those of the native tribes, and as white women were not to be had and natives were better than none, they took native women for wives, and by them not a few raised large families of sons and daughters. None of these people at the time were lawfully married, for the very good reason that there was no one within reach legally qualified to perform the marriage ceremony. According to the law of England, all the children born noder these circumstances are illegitimate and diaqualified from inheriting any share of the property which their parents may possess, should they die intestate. There are accres, if not hundreds, of such persons scattered over the country, laboring under those legal disabilities, some of hase parents are in a measure indebted to their labors and exertions for the wealth they have accumulated; and yet if through any unforeseen accident resolting in death, and neglect on the part of the parents of these people to make a will, they might be turned loose upon the world without a dollar, and even the proceeds of their own labor and industry be handed over to strangers by virtue of the law of England, because, forsooth, that law brands them as illegitimate, and not eatitled to the same measure of pro-tection as those whose good fortune it was to be born in wedlock. Any law that will so operate against innocent SPROAT & persons, smacks very much of barbarism It is a twin brother to the law of primogasiture, which, in the event of a parent dying intestate, gives all the property to the eldest son, and robs every other member of the family. If a child is born out of wedlock, it is not the child's fault; nor should the sin of the parents be visited upon the child for a condition of things over which it had no control. If the parents ere guilty of a violation of the law, let them, and not their children, be punished for it. That would have both justice and common sense to commend it, and the administrators of the law instead of winking at and tolerating crime, would, Wines & Liquors as they should, be a terror to evil doers. The Lieutenant Governor will now be estisfied, we presume, that the Legisla-ture and the public desire the enactment of this law, and will give effect to that J. Klepper & Co.s' Bordeaux Wine, desire by sanctioning the Bill. If the J. News & Son, Mayance, Mineral Waters local Legislature possessed no power of legislation in a matter of this kind, the Dominion Government would most undeabtedly have said so. The fact that they did not say so, should be understood as an admission of the right of our Legislature to deal with the subject. It in no way interferes with either the law of ply opens up a way for those who having children are now living unlawfully together to secure the legitimacy of their offspriag by getting married, and also to legitamise all those persons who in early days were born out of wedlock where marriage or the law of divorce, but simdays were born out of wedlock, whose parents subsequently were married, but whose marriage in no way improved the legal status of such illegitimates. In avery sense of the word the measure is

Others again, in subsequent ages, believed that lost spirits were incarcerated in the body of comets, and hurried by them at a speed of eight handred thousand miles an hour to the extremes of perishing cold and devouring fire, as a punishment for their evil doings. Calix.us III, regarded the comet of his day as in league with the Turks. He directed the church bells to toll at noon; the Ava Marias to be repeated, and to this prayer was added, "Lord save us from the devil, the Turks, and the comet." Cardinal Mazzini, when about to die, said "the comet does me great boner," when informed by his attendants that one appeared in the heavens; and Shakensene wisely said, "when beggare die there are so comets seen."
